CHECK OF CENSUS IS COMPLETE ROMNEY ANNOUNCES

Supervisor George Romney, Jr., director of the census for this district, today gave out a statement regarding the checking up of names of persons submitted by school children as not having been enumerated.

"The checking up of the lists submitted by children of various schools has proved these reports virtually null and void," he said. "The majority of lists when checked disclosed the fact that the names of persons submitted had been enumerated except in such instances where persons were not at home when enumerators called."

In reference to the lists submitted from the mayor's office, Mr. Romney said, in practically all cases to which our attention was called, it was found that the people had not been at home when enumerators called. Almost no attention was given to individual census slips which were left at the homes of people who were not there when the enumerators called.

"With the exception of two districts immediately south of Twenty-fifth street, the checking up work did not add more than two names to the enumerators' lists. The entire checking up will not add more than 125 names to Ogden's total for this census.

"I can truthfully say that Ogden has as complete an enumeration as it is possible to get and I personally congratulate the census enumerators for the thoroughness with which they have carried out their task."

Mr. Romney stated that a number of non-resident farm slips which indicated that owners of farms in various parts of the state were living in Ogden have been received in his office. The address of these persons is indefinite and thus far efforts to locate them have been unsuccessful. A list of names of persons whose addresses have not been determined is as follows:

Joseph Jenkins, John Darney, Lindsay Land & Livestock company, A. R. C. Smith estate, William Gibby, Joseph J. Harrison, Benjamin F. Thomas, G. R. Belnap, James Wadman, Mrs. Phemie Osborn.

Mr. Romney has asked that these people, or representatives of the company and estate mentioned, call at the census offices in the federal building.

MYSTERY UNDERGROUND WATERS BUCKLE PAVEMENT IN OGDEN; WONDER DEVICE WILL BE USED

Following the discovery that subterranean waters have caused extensive damage to the pavement on Twenty-sixth street hill, the waterworks department was planning today to put into use the wonderful device it possesses to determine just where there are breaks in water mains.

City officials today made an inspection of the trouble on Twenty-sixth street. They declared the pavement was buckled in some places and was in danger of cracking in several other places.

How that water got under the pavement seems to be a mystery. It was present, seemingly, during the cold weather, and the expansion of the water when it froze did much of the damage.

If the subterranean waters come from broken mains the electrical device of the waterworks department will find the leak, it is declared. The invention of a leak finder is said to have saved waterworks departments thousands of dollars and in the present instance promises to save a big sum in Ogden.

The apparatus will be operated this evening when traffic on the street is at its lowest ebb.

STONE WATER PIPES USED BY ANCIENT TRIBES FOUND HIGHWAY PLANNED TO OPEN WONDERFUL PLAYGROUNDS

A detailed description of the ancient stone waterpipes thought to have been built by prehistoric dwellers of the Sevier forest, has been received by J. W. Humphries, supervisor of the Sevier forest.

The pipe line was discovered in 1917 by two forest service employees, who immediately afterwards entered the service with the Tenth engineers.

Recently, T. Lomasson, one of the discoverers, forwarded a description of the location of the pipe to the supervisor of the forest. Information that the location has been discovered was mailed to the local forest service offices.

It is expected that the archeological department of the University of Utah will take measures to ascertain the origin of the pipes and their extent.

Indications were that the pipes were used to convey the water for irrigation purposes.

Scenic interest of the Lincoln highway may be augmented in the near future between Evanston and Ogden, should the plan of building a road up Weber canyon to the headwaters of the Bear river be realized by the people of Summit county.

The area contains large open valleys in which golf links, tennis courts, and other sport features could be introduced. Lakes afford opportunity for boating. As the highest peaks in the state are in the immediate vicinity mountaineering is assured, while trout streams which have been virtually untouched, afford joy for the fisherman.

From a scenic standpoint, the growth of evergreen timber offers advantages which equal any in western states.

According to D. Parkinson, supervisor of the Wasatch national forest, who is in Ogden today, the Summit county people are in favor of a road which will extend through Weber canyon and up the Weber river to Hayden's Fork, near the headwaters of the Bear river. Such a road will open the wonderful recreational resources within the Wasatch forest. This road, which will terminate at Oakley, will be approximately 49 miles, directly south of Evanston, Wyoming, and will probably cause the Lincoln Highway association to construct a connecting link between Oakley and Evanston, thus eliminating a stretch of highway that holds little scenic interest.

Distric Engineer J. P. Martin says the road would open resources and recreational advantages unsurpassed by any in the state.

Due to appropriations for this year being allotted to other roads, it is not known whether or not the forest service will co-operate with Summit county in extending the road along the Weber river to Oakley. This road would be approximately 3 1/2 miles longer than the road which would extend into the Wasatch national forest. It is possible that the state road commission and the Lincoln Highway association will co-operate in the matter of constructing the highway.

In addition to the people of Summit county being interested in the highway, Supervisor Parkinson stated that the Salt Lake Commercial club, Utah Associated Industries, Utah Manufacturers Association, and others, representing 3,700 people, were interested in the development of the recreational center and the division of the Lincoln highway through the Wasatch forest by way of Hayden's Fork.

The president's improvement from week to week is noticeable, Dr. Grayson continued. He is allowed to walk from room to room on the second floor with the aid of his cane, but so far has not been permitted to venture below stairs out of his wheel chair.
